Section-'A'

1. Read the following passage carefully and answer the questions given below —

1×9=9

The parents play an important role in bringing up their children. They sacrifice their pleasure for the sake of their children. They try their best to give them the best possible education. They labour hard to feed and clad them. They also provide all possible facilities to them. In this way, the children owe a heavy debt to their parents because they fulfil their physical and monetary needs. So it is moral duty of the children to look after their parents in their old age. They should respect and help them in every way, service to parents is the true service to God. The naughty children who discard their old parents and speak ill of them should be compelled by law to look after their parents.

I look at the flute seller standing in a corner of the square near the hotel. In his hand is a pole with an attachment at the top from which fifty or sixty bansuris produce in all directions, like the squills of a porcupine. They are of bamboo. There are cross flutes and recorders. From time to time he stands the pole on the ground, selects a flute and plays for a few minutes. He plays slowly, meditatively without excessive display. He does not shout out his wares. Occasionally he makes a sale, but in a curiously offhanded way as if this were incidental to his enterprise. Sometimes he breaks off playing talk to the fruits seller.
