Albert Einstein, one of the great man of modern science, was born on 14 march 1879, in Ulm, Germany. During his boyhood in Munich he was shy, sensitive and unhappy. His harsh teachers, whom he called "non-commissioned officers" considered him stupid and tried to flog sense into him. When they realized that he knew more about mathematics than any of them would ever know, they disliked him even more. Albert was also made to suffer from German anti-semitism, and he hated the militarism of the German empire to such an extent that he persuaded his father to promise him that he would never have to do compulsory military service in 1894, the family moved to Italy. Later Einstein received the degree of Doctor of Philosophy at the university of Zurich, in Switzerland, and taught mathematics and physics at the polytechnic school in Zurich. In 1900, he became examiner of patent in the Berne patent office, where, having become a swiss subject, he remained untill 1909. In 1911 he took the chair of physics at prague, and returned to the polytechnic school in Zurich the following year.

By 1913, Einstein was so well known that a place was made especially for him in Bertin as Director of the Kaiser-Wilhelm physical Institute-He was elected to the Royal Prussian Academy of science and received funds to enable him to devote all his time to research. In addition to membership in several other learned societies and academics, the universities of Geneva Manchester, Rostock and Princeton conferred honorary degress on him. 13. Read the following passage carefully and answer the questions given below it.

The subject assigned to me is, "what are the prospects of democracy in India?" Most Indians speak with great pride as though their country was already a democracy. The foreigners also, when they sit at a dinner table to do diplomatic honour to India, speak of the Great Indian Prime minister and the Great Indian Democracy.

From this, it is hold without waiting to argue that where there is a Republic, there must be democracy. It is also supposed that where there is parliament which is elected by the people on adult suffrage and the laws are made by the people's representatives in parliament elected after few years, there is democracy. In other words, democracy is understood to be a political instrument and where this political instrument exists, there is democracy.

Democracy is quite different from Republic as well as from Parliamentary government. The roots of democracy lie not in the form of Government, Parliamentary or otherwise-A democracy is more than a form of Government. It is primarily a mode of associated living—the roots of Democracy are to be searched in the social relationships in the terms of associated life between the people who form a society.
